

Quaranta publishes book on product liability law for Chinese market

Philip Quaranta (Partner – White Plains) authored a book on U.S. product liability law for the Chinese market. The book was published and is being distributed in China by LexisNexis. Phil's book, entitled "United States Export Product Liability - A Primer for Chinese Manufacturers and Their Insurers," discusses the product liability laws and procedures faced by Chinese manufacturers exporting their products into the United States marketplace. The book is specifically intended for the Chinese manufacturers and insurance companies with limited experience in defending product liability claims. Phil was greatly assisted in the preparation of this book by Catherine Chen.

Phil's practice focuses on the defense of product liability cases. He has defended cases involving machine tools, hand tools, electrical appliances, automobiles, snowmobiles, boats, personal watercraft, outboard engines, construction equipment, all-terrain vehicles, motorcycles, bicycles, tires, chemicals, cigarette lighters, kerosene heaters, and sporting equipment. For more than three years, Philip was the managing partner of the firm's Tokyo office. He is a frequent lecturer on product liability and product liability loss prevention for Japanese insurance companies and manufacturers and was formerly admitted to practice law in Japan as Gaikokuho Jimu Bengoshi.
